Three children find they have amazing superpowers when they are transported to an extraordinary world where global warming has destroyed a once-great civilization.

THE BOOK

Twelve-year-old twins Anna and Dan and their baby brother Bash find themselves in a post-apocalyptic world of stone men, ghosts and spirits. It is over a thousand years since the civilization of the Ancients imploded from the effects of global warming, war and plague.

Separated from her brothers, Anna is befriended by Rinka, an old woman with a special place in the nomadic community of the Families. Very soon Anna realises that only her spirit has been transported to Rinka's world and that within days she will fade into the emptiness of the universe.

Anna, Dan and Bash have adventures with the cruel Master, their new friend Monkey, Kerlan the one-armed bounty hunter and Corseth, the stone man.

Can Anna, Dan and Bash use their special spirit powers to help Rinka and the Families in the fight against the tyrant Vaseth? Can they fulfil the strange prophecy of the Blood Moon? Can they return to their own world before they fade? And who is the bearded man?

THE AUTHOR

Nicholas Light had a successful career in the medical device industry before leaving to pursue his love of writing for children. Portents, part one of the Spirit Rules trilogy, is his first book. The second and third books in the trilogy, The Numbers and Chronomancer, are also published by Tula.
